NEWS RELEASE

The Ministry of Education reaffirms that the Government's Policy with regard to its dealing with Denominational Boards of Education has been developed over the past forty-five years.

This Policy is guided by two major documents:

- The Concordat of 1960
- The Education Act, 1966

The Ministry of Education's current approach with regard to its dealing with Denominational Boards of Education in NO WAY reflects a change in Government's policy or relationship. Rather, it demonstrates Government's intention to deepen the relationship between the Denominational Boards and the State.

The current approach in dealing with the Denominational Boards of Education is detailed on the Ministry's website and in a statement made by Senator Hazel Manning, Minister of Education in the House of Representatives on Friday June 4, 2007.
