

P Project Narrative

Your project must contain a Project Narrative that provides important information about your project to the judges and other viewers of your site.

The project narrative must be the first page of your website and it should:

Define Your Community

Your narrative defines your "community" and shows how your project empowered and united the community around a common goal. Your narrative should clearly describe the project's contribution to both your local community and to the global Internet community. Of course, the contents of your project web pages should support the claims you make in the project narrative.

Chronicle Your Project

The Project Narrative is a valuable chronicle of your project for your parents, administrators, and members of your community to help them understand and appreciate your efforts and accomplishments in putting this project together. The Project Narrative "documents" the student learning that has occurred.

Hyperlink to Your Project and Bibliography

The Project Narrative page contains a hyperlink directly to your CyberFair project so that visitors will understand the story behind the creation of your CyberFair project.

There must also be a hyperlink to your project bibliography where you should cite relevant sources for the information in your project.

See Project Narrative Form for further details.
